EXCURSIONS.

The regular Wednesday trips of the steamer Samuel J. Pentz to River View will be made tomorrow, and as these midweek nearly 2,000 visitors, and the expectation is that this number will be exceeded this week. There will be no crowding, for both the steamer Samuel J. Pentz and the steamer Estelle Randall will make trips to accommodate the excursionists. On the steamer on her trips to and from the resort the View orchestra, under the lead-ership of Prof. Arth, will be heard in concert, and at River View there will be music and dancing all day and evening. The ever-popular amusement, "shooting the chute," can be had, and all the other attractions of the View will be ready to furnish amusement. The Pentz will leave at 10 a.m., 2:45 and 6:45 p.m., and, returning, will leave River View at 12:15, 5, 8 and 10 p.m. No dangerous mines have to be crossed to reach River View.

Those two-day outings on the steamer Harry Randall are the most delightful short trips out of Washington. Leaving here at 7 a.m. on Sunday, Tuesday or Thursday, the excirsionist is taken the length of the beautiful Potomac river, stopping at all the landings, where many things of interest to those who know but little of life on the river can be seen, and arriving at Nomini, the terminus of the route, in time for a good night's rest. Next day the return trip is made, new landings are touched at, new places are to be seen and the pleasure seeker is landed in Washington before 8 o'clock, after two days of enjoyment. This trip includes the round-trip ticket, dinner, supper, lodging, breakfast and dinner on the steamer, and it will be found the best and most enjoyable expenditure that you can make for an outing. It is particularly suitable to business men who can only spare a short time

Writes of His Experiences.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., July 19.-Frank

Lazier of Morgantown, who is on the cruiser Baltimore at Manila, writes to relatives here of his experiences in going ashore two days after the famous battle of May 1. He says:

"We met a few straggling natives here and there, who were carrying off all the valuables they could find, and we soon ran them out. As soon as we landed we could quickly detect an awful stench coming from the yard further up. We fell in and marched up through a beautiful park in front of the commandant's building, passing many large buildings, all thrown open and deserted. We could see very plainly that the insurgents had looted everything. "Next, we passed the officers' hospital, and the sights in these I will never forget. As we stepped under the archway nothing but blood could be seen. The crim-son was everywhere. Inside the first ward were three dead Spaniards, one lying with his face down on the floor in a pool of blood and the other two were lying on bunks. Owing to the extremely hot weather their bodies were in an awful state of decay. Alongside the cots were all kinds of instruments and medicines lying in perfect order, abandoned by the surgeons in their back.

"We found in that one hospital nine dead bodies. These we buried in the afternoon in the rear of the hospital. Some of the searching party found more bodies in different parts of the yard, and all were buried before sunset that day different parts of the yard, and all were buried before sunset that day.

"After the sentries had been stationed in different parts of the yard the rest of us were permitted to take a look around. We went into all the large buildings and picked up many curios. On the second floor of the commandant's building one of our 8-inch shells had exploded, doing terrible damage. I went through room after room damage. I went through room after room and everything had been turned upside down. Costly furniture and all else belonging to a wealthy man's house were in disorder, but the most of it had not received a scratch. Large libraries full of all kinds of costly books and charts had never been touched and were now open for us to help ourselves. to help ourselves. "In the open courts of all the private dwellings were beautiful beds of flowers and fountains inlaid with crystal sea and fountains inlaid with crystal sea shells, shaded by large leafy paims. The flooring was made of white marble, studded here and there with bronze and marble statues, making it a paradise to live in. Large sea shells were filled with flowers, all of which are now dying for the want of water. "All of these beautiful houses, courts and parks, which had once been their homes, are now lonesome and deserted. They even left their horses in their stables and ows in the fields, all of which we now have and are taking care of. Their cats and dogs made friends with us and we have a regular menagerie around the guard house now, consisting of cats, dogs, monkeys, goats, deer, water buffalo and

WORK OF A YEAR.

Annual Exhibit Made by District Inspector of Boilers.

The annual report of Mr. J. H. Wilkerson, the District inspector of boilers, has been submitted to the Commissioners. It shows that during the year ending June 30, 1898. the number of steam boilers inspected was 613, and fourteen were inspected for the District of Columbia, a total of 627; fortyeight new steam boilers were erected, twenty-eight condemned for repairs, and twelve as unsafe for further use. There were no explosions of steam boilers during the year.

The sum of $3,000 was received as fees The sum of $3,000 was received as fees for inspection at the rate of $5 apiece, with $65 still due the inspector on this account. His total expenses for the year were $1,442; total income, $3,000; leaving a balance of $1,558, and the estimate for expenses for the year ending June 30, 1899, is placed at $1,500. The inspector states that the year has

The inspector states that the year has been the most successful since his connection with the office. There have been no accidents of any kind, but to better the condition of the office of steam boiler inspection the inspector recommends to the Commissioners the importance of making every effort to have the bill before the Senate passed, so that the District of Columbia will have a suitable law governing the inspection of steam boilers.

ance of "A Scrap of Paper" at the Columbia Theater last night was comewhat in the nature of a supplementary surprise. The excellent organization which has done so much to make summer endurable prolonged its season to make a venture beyond the limitations which have hitherto been observed. "A Scrap of Paper." while a light comedy, is no small enterprise, especially on a warm night. Circumstances, of course, precluded a possibility of the unstinted rehearsal required in a piece whose claim depends almost entirely on subtle suggestion on the part of the players. There was less need to make allowances for the work of the company than such an array of difficulties would suggest. With the skill of experienced performers they carried the action along always smoothly, and usually with spontaneity and force. With many points deserving of praise, it was not what might be called a settled presentation—such as would be expected tonight. The Columbia people have a marvelous faculty of rapid progress, and the first performance, however good, is never first performance, however good, is never to be set down as a complete test of its capabilities. Much of the merit of "A Scrap of Paper" lies in the piquancy of its language. Previous achievement leaves little doubt that a single presentation will suffice to give the speeches confident

Miss Maud Haslam displayed that delicate comprehension of dramatic effect which has been a wonder and a delight throughout the summer season. The facility with which she adapts her personality to a widely variant range of characters is to a widely variant range of characters is an assurance that she is not only a clever woman, but a painstaking student. Mr. Jomes O. Barrows displayed the breezy good nature which Washington people would sadly miss from the summer amusement season, and Mr. William Ingersoil was as easy in demeanor and as agreeable in personal appearance as when the in personal appearance as when in personal appearance as when the temptation to pose as a matinee actor was first thrust upon him and manfully resisted. Mr. Ingersoll's acting has a sturdy basis of artistic determination which assures him a successful future. The company as a whole won numerous demonstrations of approval from the audience. tions of approval from the audience.

UNION ROOF GARDEN.—Amusement seekers flocked to the Union Roof Garden last night in numbers which indicated that the management had discovered that valuable rarity, a long-felt want. While the architecture of the place is crude, much of it being still fresh from the hands of the of it being still fresh from the hands of the carpenter, the management has engaged clever entertainers and supplemented a program which aims at quality rather than quantity, with an opportunity to dance for those who feel so inclined. A strictly temperance roof garden would seem an temperance roof garden would seem an anomaly in a community where altitudinous entertainment was more familiar than it is here. But it has its advantages. Among the performers last night was Miss Truly Shattuck, who has a good voice, a good figure, and, it must therefore be assumed, a good salary. There is an air of conscious superiority about Miss Truly which at once proclaims the fact Truly which at once proclaims the fact that she is not of the ordinary music hall song bird tribe, and her voice confirms the impression, for it has excellent serious capabilities. Al. Stern's imitations were enthusiastically received. He introduces one of Francis Wilson which in addition to being clever has the merit of novelty. The more familiar impersonations of Robson, Hopper and Lackaye as Svengali were all good. Among the other entertainers are Lillian Perry in songs and dances; Pauline Moran, serio comic; Perry and Burns, comedy team, and Mignon Gilbert. The Union Roof Garden, if it continues its present policy of engaging good variety enter-tainers and catering to a conservative clientele, will deserve well at the hands of

GLEN ECHO AMPHITHEATER.-There was not a crowd of spectators last evening at the amphitheater at Glen Echo to wit-ness the opening performance of the week by the leading characters of the Parry Opera Company, supplemented by several vaudeville numbers. The large size of the place made the crowd look much smaller than it really was. The program was a little late in starting. Swift and Chase, musical comedians, opened the show. Their ability on different musical instruments of many varieties was fully demonstrated. As black face comedians they rendered many bright and witty sayings, though some of the jokes were almost too far fetched. The Belmos, the aerial artists, were excellent in trapeze work, and their work was fully appreciated. The give from the roof of the auditorium, the passage through several hoops of fire and the landing upon the stage was a remarkable feat. Clivette. the shadowgraphist and juggler, who lighted the audiences every evening last week, remains over for the present week. His work is of the gilt edge order, and, if anything, is an improvement on his performances last week. His specialty been well mastered and certainly is well enjoyed by the spectators. The program concluded with "Lovely Galatea," a one-act operetta by Von Suppe, in which the principals of the Parry Opera Company Charles Hawley, as Pygmalion, appear. Charles Hawley, as Pygmalion, displays his talents, especially vocal, to good advantage. Miss Allene Crater, as Galatea, renders her score in her usually fine manner. Miss Viola D'Armon, as Ganymede, an apprentice of Pygmalicu, assumes a masculine role in a way that captivates all. She makes an excellent appearance in that character. Frank De shon, the comedian, managed to instill plenty of life in the operetta, in assuming the role of Midas, a patron of arts. If nothing more than in the simple make-up Deshon would prove humorous. The operet ta is presented under the direction of Mr. George P. Towle. The same bill will continue every evening this week. INJUNCTION AND ACCOUNTING. Suit Entered Therefor Against General Construction Company.

Nathaniel McKay of this city has enered suit against Thos. Girvan and Wm. M. Ducker of New York, trading as the General Construction Co., asking for an injunction and an accounting. The complainant sets forth that May 27 last, for he purpose of constructing the Ducker patent portable houses and hospitals, he entered into an agreement and contract with the defendants to furnish to them $2,000 and more when it was needed for the purpose of furnishing orders to the United States government in supplying these portable houses and hospitals. In the construction of the hospitals t

Girvan and Ducker, a sum in excess of $6,000. According to the agreement Mc Kay was to receive one-third of the profits resulting from the orders for the porta-ble hospitals in return for the financial aid he was to give. It was also agreed that the defendants were to assign all the orders and contracts to McKay as security, he being authorized to make the collections for the same, and the War, Navy and Treasury Departments were to send all drafts and checks to him, and the defendants agreed to indorse them.

Two field hospitals were constructed in Washington at the lumber working establishment of E. E. Jackson, and together with cots and other furniture were shipped to Port Royal, S. C., on the order of the surgeon general of the navy. The contract price was $2,500, with an addition of $69.20 freightage. The warrant for the payment of this amount was properly made out from the surgeon general's bureau and turned over to McKay, who transmitted the same through his agent and attorney for the purpose of having indorsed thereon the name of Thos. Girvan, representing himself as president of the and all drafts and checks to him, and the representing himself as president of the construction company. Girvan was hand-ed the paper for his indorsement by the ed the paper for his indorsement by the attorney, when, it is alleged, he, without explanation, folded the paper, placed it in his pocket and surreptitiously leff the city for New York, with the assumed purpose of collecting the money from the paymaster in that city.

The complainant being advised of this took steps immediately to advise the Navy Department and the payment of the draft was ordered stopped. It is prayed of the court that the defendants, their agents or representatives be enjoined from collecting the money due upon the warrant from the United States government or prohibiting that the same be disposed of before it is beyond the recovery of the complainant or the jurisdiction of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, and to enjoin them from taking any steps in the premises until the taking any steps in the premises until the matter is properly adjusted by the Sec-retary of the Navy or the officers of the retary of the Navy or the officers of the government having charge thereof. It is further prayed that the defendants be en-joined from receiving or collecting any further checks or drafts on the contracts.
